

BROOKLYN ITEMS.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.—The Republican City Convention of Brooklyn has nominated Francis B. Stryker for the office of Mayor, and a nomination could not have been made. He is exceedingly popular among the people, and justly so, whenever sickness or distress of any kind visited the city. Mr. Stryker has always been among the first to render his assistance. His purse has always been open to the poor, no person in actual want ever applied to him in vain; and as a politician he has always been a consistent advocate of Freedom, of the oppressed and down-trodden, of whatever nation or color he pleased. If there is any man in Brooklyn that should receive the support of all in moderate circumstances, it is Francis B. Stryker; and we hope the Republicans will exert themselves manfully in his favor. He can be triumphantly elected if those who ought to be his friends do their duty. In his former administration as Mayor of the city, and in his whole official career, his conduct has been "above suspicion and above reproach," having always devoted himself to the best interests of the public. And now, Republicans of Brooklyn, elect him.

POLITICAL DEBATE.—A very large concourse of ladies and gentlemen assembled at the Brooklyn Museum on Saturday evening to hear a debate on the prominent political questions of the day by Hon. Lucien B. Chase, formerly of Tennessee, and now of New York city, and Lieut. Gov. Raymond. Edward W. Faile, Republican, was chosen President, and Adrian Egeeman and George L. Thatch, Democrats, Vice-presidents. Mr. Chase opened the debate, and spoke for fifty-five minutes. Mr. Raymond followed in a speech of an hour's duration, and Mr. Chase, who was allowed half an hour in answer, spoke a few minutes, and excused himself on account of a severe headache. Mr. Chase defended the policy of the administration in regard to Kansas, and upheld the doctrine of the Ostend Manifesto as applied to Cuba; while Mr. Raymond argued in opposition. The sentiments expressed by the latter were enthusiastically cheered; and at the conclusion both speakers were applauded, and a vote of thanks was passed by the audience.
